About Tower

Founded in 1970, Tower Community Bank opened its doors with the specific task of serving underserved members of the community.

Tower originally served miners, factory workers, and other members of the community struggling to get loans and bank accounts elsewhere.

Launch Tower's first- ever virtual bank

Tower partnered with Invo to create new digital channels that went beyond traditional banking possibilities. They needed tech that was user friendly and easily meshed with existing technologies.

Tower deployed in-branch, web, and mobile video banking, allowing customers to access tellers and staff from anywhere they had internet access. Through tools like co-browsing, electronic signature, and document capture, customers can complete complex financial transactions – from start to finish – on one call.

Deploy strategy that increases revenue

Tower wanted to monetize service tools. They hired a new Virtual Bank Director from outside the financial industry who turned to Invo for help.

By deploying video banking tools, Tower can now utilize existing staff better and save up to $120K in annual staffing costs. Tower also deployed tools like co-browsing, which sees sales increases near 10% when deployed by financial institutions.

Serve underserved customers in the area

Tower Community Bank entered 2023 looking to launch a new Latino bank branch in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, an underserved community needing accessible and convenient banking services.

Tower is launching this branch with the help of Invo digital tools such as web video banking and co-browsing, allowing members of the community to access their bank without being in-person at a branch.

“Our goal is to make [virtual banking] as easy and as obvious as possible.”
